Public Comment

Sandy Schenkat reiterated her comments from the Commission's March and August meetings, suggesting City Council meetings be opened with a moment of silence instead of an invocation. She noted that the Satanic Temple has filed a lawsuit against the City of Scottsdale for being denied the opportunity to deliver an invocation during a City Council meeting.

Luke Douglas reiterated his comments from the August meeting, on behalf of the Humanists Society of Greater Phoenix. He stressed the importance of separating church and state. He recommended that the Human Relations Commission make a recommendation to City Council that they eliminate the invocation and replace it with a moment of silence.

Paula Waybright stressed the importance of eliminating all invocation from City meetings and events. She felt that invocations and prayers could be perceived by many as a point of division among citizens. A moment of silence would support rights of citizens to worship as they choose.

Carol Consalvo, National Council of Jewish Women advocate, spoke in favor of eliminating invocations during government meetings. She stressed the importance of government bodies being inclusive to all citizens, regardless of their religious beliefs.

3. Discussion to follow up on August Commission meeting items

- Invocation

Vice-Chair Shimokubo said that the Commission did follow up with the City Manager's Office regarding the idea of making a recommendation to City Council that they replace the invocation with a moment of silence at the beginning of each meeting. Because of the pending litigation, the City Manager has issued direction that it would be appropriate for the Human Relations Commission to wait to make any recommendation to City Council regarding invocations until the case has been decided. The case is scheduled to go to trial in December 2019.

Commissioner Eaneman opined that the Human Relations Commission should move forward with the recommendation now. Brent Stockwell, Assistant City Manager, explained that the City Manager's direction is in no way intended to limit the Commission's scope of work; it is meant to be mindful of the Federal Court process.

Commissioner Hinchman commented that delaying further discussion in no way says that the Commission will not in the future make the recommendation to Council. It is best to avoid involvement with ongoing Federal litigation.

Commissioner Eaneman argued that a motion should be made to the effect that the Commission intends to make a recommendation to City Council at a future date that they eliminate the invocation from their meetings.

Bill Hylen reminded the Commission that this agenda item was for information/discussion only.

Mr. Stockwell said that the City is following the legal process. The same substantive issue has been initiated in court by another entity and that process should be allowed to follow through to completion before another entity (the HRC) initiates a recommendation.

Commissioners agreed to have the topic agendaized for a future meeting at a time that is deemed appropriate by the City Manager's office.

- Dr. Sproat letter follow up

Ms. Cini said that when following up on direction from the Commission during the August meeting, she learned more about the complications of having a letter signed by all City Council members. She also learned that Mayor Lane had at that point already taken the initiative to write a letter to Dr. Sproat regarding the incident.

Dr. Sproat said that she was pleased to have received the letter from Mayor Lane and the members of Scottsdale Together Overcoming Prejudice (STOP) are motivated by the City's support.

4. Presentation, discussion and recommendations on 2019 Human Relations Commission strategic plan

- Review current planning for the Golden Rule celebration 2020

Ms. Cini announced that a planning meeting that will include STOP as a new Community Partner is scheduled for September 10th. Both WestWorld and McCormick-Stillman Railroad Park are being considered as locations for the 2020 celebration.

Commissioner Hinchman spoke in support of holding the event at McCormick-Stillman Railroad Park, because it is most conducive environment for involving children.

Dr. Sproat said that STOP's goal is to put together an event that brings together all of the Diversity Partners to raise awareness with all ages with a focus on educating youth.

- Review planning and schedule for Dinner & Dialogue

Commissioner Rhoden said that there have been no further developments for the next Dinner and Dialogue event since the last meeting. He suggested that the Dinner and Dialogue group be combined as a subcategory under Scottsdale for All. He opined that the change would offer an opportunity for two more Commissioners to work on Scottsdale for All projects and would offer more opportunities to promote Scottsdale for All through the Dinner and Dialogue events.

- Scottsdale for All project – Discuss which Commissioner will volunteer to handle project

Discussion ensued regarding the suggestion to add Dinner and Dialogue to the Scottsdale for All category. Commissioners agreed to agendaize the discussion for a later date, when the incoming Commissioners can take part in the discussion.

5. Presentation, discussion and recommendation to include STOP (Scottsdale Together Overcoming Prejudice) as a Community Diversity Partner
